

Surviving the cobbles: the game-changing pad for the Flanders Challenge

With just days to go before one of the North's most thrilling races, technology is set to support the pros.

Tackling a race like the Tour of Flanders isn't just about endurance and strategy; it's also about comfort and protection in the saddle. Amid the constant jolts of the legendary cobbled sections, choosing the right pad can make all the difference for every rider. Teosport offers several solutions designed to meet the demands of this iconic race. The TM EVO and TM Armadillo models, in their Revo, Concept and Plus variants, have been developed specifically for both men and women. Each model is designed to accommodate different needs in comfort, support, and performance. These pads are the result of meticulous research and development aimed at improving the experience of those who face highly challenging routes like the Ronde Van Vlaanderen

The TM Armadillo Plus is the ultimate choice for those seeking peak performance and technology. Featuring an innovative three-layer Poron composition, it offers superior support and impact absorption, making it the perfect ally for taking on the mythical Flanders course. The pad is designed to withstand the intense stress and vibrations of the cobbled roads, which can hinder endurance during the race, while offering excellent impact protection.

Extra Poron support is strategically placed at the front and back of the pad to reduce pressure and prevent chafing in sensitive areas such as the perineum and ischium. This added support becomes crucial during the most demanding phases of the race, when comfort is essential to maintaining focus and performance.

The technical characteristics of Armadillo foam—including torsion, inclination, extension, and compression—are engineered to respond to precise pressures, ensuring the pad adapts seamlessly to the rider's body, even in the most critical situations.

Teosport continues to establish itself as a key player in professional cycling, thanks to years of research and a brand that consistently supports athletes chasing their dreams. As adrenaline surges and the northern countryside comes alive, we embrace the passion, grit, and glory of cycling's Holy Week—an unmissable spectacle for fans around the world.
